The Top Three

Delivering more parcels and protecting jobs

Australia Post has guaranteed that there will be no forced redundancies or cuts to posties' pay. Christine Holgate said the average postie now carries just one-third of the letters they did 10 years ago, and that their help was needed to deliver growing parcel volumes.

Basic boxes delivered

As the coronavirus pandemic hit, major supermarkets rushed to respond to the crisis. To help the community's most vulnerable, Woolworths immediately approached Australia Post to help deliver a box of essentials. In total, 80,000 basic boxes were delivered to households who needed them most.

Shop locally to boost recovery

A switch in spending away from hospitality and tourism as a result of the pandemic will hurt local business long term. While online sales can be a growth path for individual regional makers and retailers, for our regions to benefit they need to win more of these sales.
